

DATED: THE FUTURE.

Hey Ant,

It's your future self, here.

I really hope this letter finds you well; Interdimensional Future Mail™ is not running quite as well as everyone had hoped. I guess it's just something we'll never quite master. But we're going to keep trying! It's not a billionaire owned project or company; we've pretty much eradicated all of those. Mail services were the last ones to go, hence the teething issues.

We write on light green paper now. It's friendly to all eyes. White pages have been banished. It was over stimulating the neurodivergent population, so we, as a global nation, mutually decided to remove it. Oh, yeah, sorry, should mention- the world identifies as one human nation, now. We're one giant collective. We have a beautiful communication system based on good, old-fashioned tins and string. (They make lovely sounds in the wind!!)

They connect to every single home in every city, in every country in the world, and are scattered everywhere throughout the streets, balancing on their tightrope.

When we make decisions, I mean WE. EVERYONE. We are all connected and decided it was about time we started acting like it! We've moved past the Anthropocene and we're now in the age we call the Amourcene; Love conquers all and hate is not tolerated here in any form.

Our new green paper is made from sustainable materials, and we don't source them from trees. In fact we don't source anything from trees. It's pretty great- some people spend full days holding their favourite tree or just lying with plant-life, basking in the weight of the quiet that we've created for all of us.

We don't use the term ~~climate change~~ anymore... Now that balance has been restored to our beautiful planet, we have no need for it. We aim to look to the now, inwardly and collectively. We believe that this term simply serves to remind us of a darker time.

There are no more starving artists. No one is without shelter, food, love, or support. We don't have jobs or specific roles anymore, we no longer farm for profit, no longer use currency.

Burnout no longer exists. The last recorded case was dealt with with our radical healing, peace, and connection to nature method. Over the course of a month, you are re-integrated with nature by spending the full duration of the time in the company of your favourite tree and a selection of plants, animals, and, where appropriate, people.

Terms such as health and wellness no longer exist. We now understand that these things are inherent and integral to our preservation; things that cannot really be expressed through words. We now express these concepts through actions and gestures.

Since we only allow for one page per letter for sustainability reasons, I should probably wrap up.

So much has changed. I really wish I could show you how much. We decided that just because we are able to communicate with the past, it doesn't mean the past is ready to see the lessons we have learned. Not just yet. There is a lot of damage still working to be unravelled in your time. But it will come. Be patient, be strong, be resilient.
